

ALASDAIR MCKENZIE, THE 19 YEARS OLD SCOTTISH CLIMBER ON COURSE FOR HIS FIFTH GUINNESS WORLD RECORD

A Scots teenager is aiming to become the youngest mountaineer to climb all 14 of the 8,000m peaks in the Himalayas. Alasdair embarked on this incredible journey when he was just 17, scaling the Lhotse and Makalu peaks in 2022 and an astounding ten more this year alone - The 29th september, he completed the Dhaulagiri, 8167m. He now has just two summits remaining in Tibet - Cho Oyu and Shishapangma. Alasdair, who has dual British and French citizenship, is determined to show the younger generation that :

"ANYTHING IS POSSIBLE"

SCALE THE HEIGHT OF YOUR AMBITION

Alasdair, who tirelessly worked and sought sponsors to raise funds to obtain the permit to conquer the 14 Himalayan peaks, created this expedition with the mantra: "Scale the height of your ambition".

"This challenge has pushed me to surpass my physical, mental and emotional limits. It's beyond anything I've ever known before.

I have just two summits to climb, which I'm aiming to do in spring 2024.

It's been a lot of hard work but I'm extremely motivated because I'm doing what I love. I want to prove to my generation that with determination and optimism, anything is possible.

We all have the capability to achieve our dreams and you can seek to scale the height of your ambition."

THE YOUNGEST TO HAVE CONQUERED THE WORLD'S 5 HIGHEST PEAKS

As the project progressed, Alasdair went from strength to strength, shattering world records. Most tellingly, in just 1 year, he became the youngest mountaineer to have climbed the 5 highest peaks in the world and has achieved 4 Guinness World records.

Picture this: Alasdair's incredible journey saw him conquer five x 8,000-meters summits in Pakistan in less than 26 days this summer !

Alasdair reflects on his connection to the mountains, saying, "Being on the mountains has changed my life." He initially learned to ski in the Cairngorms in Aviemore, igniting a lifelong passion for mountains. As he explored Nepal and its towering peaks, he realized that merely reaching their summits wasn't enough - he needed to conquer all 14.

With just two peaks remaining to complete his audacious mission, Alasdair's determination remains unwavering. He will do them in April next year. He's set to secure his place in the record books as the youngest mountaineer to scale all 14 of the Himalayan giants. This challenge, testing his physical, mental, and emotional limits, has become an integral part of his life, and he's resolute in achieving his dream.

It's worth noting that only a handful of individuals have ever completed the 8,000-meter peaks challenge. Still, Alasdair McKenzie is poised to etch his name into history as the youngest to accomplish this awe-inspiring feat, proving that with unwavering determination, one can indeed reach the highest summits of their ambitions.
